

Brindavan Gardens

SPIRITUAL / SHOEGAZE / DREAM • SEATTLE, WA • EST. 2025

Devotional reverb. Sound as spiritual practice — the sacred made audible through drones, mantras, and the resonance of contemplation.

// BIOGRAPHY

Brindavan Gardens is the spiritual sound practice of Manteis Recordings. Named after the gardens of Vrindavan — where devotion meets the earth — the project treats sound as a spiritual technology, not entertainment. The debut album Upekṣā (5 tracks) takes its name from the Buddhist concept of equanimity — the non-reactive awareness that holds all experience without grasping or pushing away. Where shoegaze wraps distortion around melody, Brindavan Gardens wraps silence around resonance. The spaces between the sounds are as intentional as the sounds themselves.
